

Online Hexavalent Chromium for General Industry

Intended Audience

The Hexavalent Chromium for General Industry course is designed for general industry workers, as well as all those who may come into contact with Hexavalent Chromium while working. Individuals who will specifically benefit from this course include the following:

- General industry workers
- General industry supervisors
- General industry managers
- Health and safety officers

If you have any concerns as to whether this course is appropriate for you or your industry, please contact us.

Learning Objectives

The Hexavalent Chromium for General Industry course is an intermediate-level training designed to serve health and safety officers, in particular. Participants will learn the essentials surrounding Hexavalent Chromium, as well as what exposure can do to the human body, OSHA standards, and more. Specific emphasis will be placed on medical surveillance, hazard communication, and other topics related to Hexavalent Chromium safety.

This online course describes chromium and how individuals can avoid the dangerous forms of chromium. Additionally, participants will cover exposure, hazards, and related illnesses.

Course Topics

- Background of Hexavalent Chromium
- Health hazards
- OSHA standard & standard highlights
- Medical surveillance
- Hazard communication
- Additional resources

Elk Environmental Services is partnered with ClickSafety to offer our clients quality online training.

