

Online Subpart C General Safety and Health for Construction

Intended Audience

The Subpart C General Safety and Health for Construction online training is intended for all those on the construction site who may be deemed responsible for the safety of the jobsite in accordance with OSHA regulations. Individuals who will specifically benefit from this course include the following:

- Construction workers
- Construction managers
- Construction supervisors
- Construction foremen

If you have any concerns as to whether this course is appropriate for you or your industry, please contact us.

Learning Objectives

The Subpart C General Safety and Health for Construction online training is an intermediate-level course designed to provide participants with the general safety and health guidelines established within OSHA's Construction Safety and Health Regulations, Subpart C. The course covers essential training elements including first aid, CPR, fire prevention, fire protection, emergency access and action plans, and more.

Subpart C General Safety and Health for Construction course is designed to elaborate upon and explain employee and employer responsibilities in maintaining onsite accident prevention programs.

Course Topics

- Overview of OSHA Subpart C for Construction
- General safety and health guidelines
- Safety training and education
- General provisions regarding safety
- Important work and jobsite definitions
- Means of egress
- Emergency action plans

Elk Environmental Services is partnered with Clicksafety to offer our clients quality online training.

